Kuta Town - South Bali Beaches

Kuta Town is well known for being the wild tourist town with bumping clubs, tons of shopping, extremely aggressive sales people, crowded beaches, and basically a whole lot of fun. We personally enjoy all of this activity, but in moderation. Best Things To Do in Kuta:

Learn to surf : Kuta Beach is one of the best and most popular places for beginners to take a surf lesson on Bali. You'll find many surf schools up and down the beach

Visit the waterpark! : Named one of the Top 3 Waterparks in the World and the #1 Waterpark in Asia, Kuta's Waterbom Bali is an excellent place to spend a day in the sun. Open daily from 9am to 6pm (excluding Nyepi Day, or Day of Silence), this is an awesome time for families, couples or groups of friends.

Have an awesome meal : There's no lack of dining options in Kuta, whether you prefer inexpensive local food at a warung, a delicious wood-fired pizza in a low-key setting, or a world class meal at a swanky restaurant.

Party down : If you're into the clubbing scene, you're in the right spot. Just remember not to overdo it, and make sure to keep an eye on your personal belongings and all members of your group!

Nusa Dua, Bali

Legian, Bali

Nusa Dua, Bali

Nusa Dua

Nusa Dua is almost in its own Bali bubble, beautiful. Clean, predominantly luxury hotels. It has its pro's and con's (as do most things), but it's perfect for a Bali family holiday or romantic getaway. Nusa Dua is only about 30 minutes from Kuta but the two are worlds apart. Nusa Dua is quiet and secluded. It is predominantly luxury hotels, beaches, and a small shopping center. The beaches are less crowded here, except for Pandawa Beach which attracts the crowds but is a stunning beach. It would be a perfect place to stay for a Bali family holiday, particularly with very young children, as there are fewer crowds and traffic and the beaches are calmer.

There is a small shopping center and some markets, restaurants, walking along the boardwalk on the beach. beach days, water sports. riding bicycles. And a lot of the other things can be doing here. It is a great place to relax and unwind.

Legian

If you heading for Bali and love to have a sunset, whitish beaches, dinner or some drinks on the beach and not too far from shops etc. you will probably end up going to either Legian or Seminyak. It is one long stretch of beach that connects all these places but every place is different and has its own characterizes. Legian has a very broad beach with many sunbeds and beanbags on it. There are fewer trees but there are many beach beds with parasols so the shadow is guaranteed. The surf is also ok but not as busy as Kuta and the water is a bit shallower. It is nice for kids to play. It's a flat beach so no uphill beds over here. The road behind the largest part of the Legian beach is car-free so it much safer for kids to cross the road.

Ubud, Bali

Monkey Forest, Ubud, Bali

Ubud

Ubud is in many ways Bali's cultural heart. It's in the cool mountains, just an hour's drive north of the airport. This traditional country town is home to one of Bali's royal families. You can even visit the majestic palace in the centre of town. Ubud is also well known as a flourishing crafts centre. Around Ubud, there are the surrounding villages of Campuhan, Penestanan, Peliatan and Batuan. These communities specialise in crafts and woodcarving which are sold all over the island. There are hundreds of shops selling antiques, woodcarvings, crafts, textiles, paintings and jewellery in Ubud. You'll also find some of the best art museums in the country here. Along Ubud's main street are dozens of art studios, an excellent local craft market and galleries.

Ubud Monkey Forest

Ubud Monkey Forest, also known as the Sacred Monkey Forest of Padangtegal, is one of Ubud's most popular attractions; a natural forest sanctuary that is home to a horde of grey long-tailed macaques. The site is well preserved thanks to a community-based management program. The forest is also conveniently positioned near Ubud Town Centre, and within easy walking distance from guesthouses and resorts along the main roads of Jalan Hanoman and the namesake Jalan Monkey Forest. Besides watching playful monkeys in their natural habitat, swinging through canopies, lazing along pathways or feeding on bananas, the site offers cool walks along paved pathways through a leafy nutmeg forest. Beautiful ancient temples with guardian statues covered in moss also feature throughout the forest. Those staying outside of Ubud and coming for a day tour usually have the Ubud Monkey Forest as a must-visit, combined with sightseeing highlights at the Ubud Royal Palace and shopping sprees through the expansive Ubud Art Market, all only a 10-minute drive away.

Tegallalang "Ceking" Rice Terrace

Tegallalang Rice Terraces in Ubud is famous for its beautiful scenes of rice paddies involving the subak (traditional Balinese cooperative irrigation system), which according to history, was passed down by a revered holy man named Rsi Markandeya in the eighth century. Tegallalang forms the three most splendid terraced landscapes in Ubud's shared region, with the others being in the villages of Pejeng and Campuhan. The Tegallalang rice terraces alone offers a scenic outlook that spreads down before you and away to the rice paddies on the slopes across the valley. The high roadside location is cool and breezy and it is a well-known spot for tourists to stop and take photos. Painters and nature lovers also enjoy visiting this spot, and there are numerous art kiosks and cafes near the ledge offering their ware.

Tanah Lot Temple

Pura Tanah Lot is a hugely popular tourist destination. It does have cultural significance to the Balinese, but this can be hard to discern amid the crowds, clamour and chaos – especially for the overhyped sunsets. It's the most visited and photographed temple in Bali; however, it has all the authenticity of a stage set – even the tower of rock that the temple sits upon is an artful reconstruction (the entire structure was crumbling) and more than one-third of the rock is artificial. For the Balinese, Pura Tanah Lot is one of the most important and venerated sea temples. Like Pura Luhur Ulu Watu, at the tip of the southern Bukit Peninsula, and Pura Rambu Siwi to the west, it is closely associated with the Majapahit priest Nirartha. It's said that each of the sea temples was intended to be within sight of the next, so they formed a chain along Bali's southwestern coast – from Pura Tanah Lot you can usually see the clifftop site of Pura Ulu Watu far to the south, and the long sweep of sea shore west to Perancak, near Negara.

Uluwatu Temple

Uluwatu Temple

Uluwatu Temple, or Pura Luhur Uluwatu, one of six key temples believed to be Bali's spiritual pillars, is renowned for its magnificent location, perched on top of a steep cliff approximately 70 metres above sea level. This temple also shares the splendid sunset backdrops as that of Tanah Lot Temple, another important sea temple located in the island's western shores. Pura Luhur Uluwatu is definitely one of the top places on the island to go to for sunset delights, with direct views overlooking the beautiful Indian Ocean and daily Kecak dance performances. Balinese architecture, traditionally-designed gateways, and ancient sculptures add to Uluwatu Temple's appeal.

Lovina Beach

Lovina Beach is a combination of smaller beaches spanning several local villages between two districts in the North Bali regency of Buleleng. The beach is a great alternative to the highly popular (and often crowded beaches of Bali's south, the likes of Kuta, Legian and Seminyak. Calmer waves, serene black-sand shores, thrills in the offing, and a nightlife scene, are just a few things that sum up this quaint north Bali coast.

Lovina Beach spans two kilometers east to west, with a small area in the Kalibukbuk village as its main focal point. Sunsets are quite the highlight here, with rather subdued nightlife after dusk. Lovina Beach's sunrises are as 'gently exciting' as its sunsets, and are when participants of dolphin watching tours board colourful traditional motorised jukung outriggers to catch a glimpse of the several different species in these waters. Keep your camera gear ready as these flippers breach the smooth water surface in a blink of an eye.
